In Acts 24, Paul is in court. The lawyer and the Jews say he started riots, but that's not true. Paul defends himself cheerfully! Felix says he'll decide later if Paul is guilty, and sends him back to jail to wait, but allows him to have visitors and have his needs met. Felix and his wife talked about Jesus with Paul often over the next two years. Eventually, another man took over Felix's job, and Felix left Paul in prison because he wanted to do the Jews a favor.
