

Acts 28:1-4

Paul and the rest of the people on the ship made it safely to Malta. Paul laid some sticks on the fire, and instantly a snake attached itself to his hand. The people thought he must be a murderer, but nothing happened to him—the snake didn't harm him, and Paul shook the snake into the fire. The people then thought he must be a god. God used Paul to heal a sick man named Publius. The people treated Paul well until he was ready to set sail again.
